

BRETT THOMSON

Brett has worked at the Crown Solicitor's Office since 2007 and has progressed through the Office occupying the positions of solicitor advocate, acting director and acting assistant crown solicitor in the Criminal Law and Inquiries practice group, with a short detour via the Administrative Law practice group. He was appointed Special Counsel in May 2017. On 1 July 2020, Brett was appointed to the role of director of the newly formed Public Safety and Justice practice group.

Brett has appeared as an advocate in Local and District Courts across NSW, as well as either appearing or instructing in the Supreme Court, Court of Appeal, Court of Criminal Appeal, the Coroner's Court, the State Parole Authority and the Mental Health Review Tribunal. He has recently had carriage of a number of prosecutions on behalf of the Prothonotary of the Supreme Court against individuals for charges of contempt of court.