

Tamira Stevensen

Senior Commercial Lawyer/Litigator, Stevensen Business Lawyers

Tamira Stevensen is the principal of Stevensen Business Lawyers, also known as SBL, one of the first Sydney-based boutique commercial law firms providing upfront-fee services. With over 25 years of experience in corporate and commercial law, she is a contract specialist and business disputes lawyer.

Tamira has represented clients in litigation to overturn unfair contracts using Australian Consumer Law and equity law, and helped clients resolve business partnership disputes by negotiating a final financial settlement. Her work has included negotiating improved leasing terms for commercial and retail shop tenants, identifying risk areas in various commercial documentation, such as supply agreements, franchises and leases, and providing strategic advice in commercial disputes.

After identifying the client's business goals, Tamira writes clear, easy-to-understand business contracts and commercial agreements to minimise risk and maximise protection. She has developed contracts for complex commercial transactions involving small and medium-sized enterprises (SMEs), structured and drafted company documents to attract investment for inventors, and renegotiated contracts, resulting in improved terms and financial benefits.
