Solicitor, Family Law and Care & Protection, Legal Aid NSW

Analiese McKelvey is a solicitor at Legal Aid NSW, practising in the family law and care and protection jurisdictions. She holds an Honours degree in law with a major in criminology from Macquarie University. Early in her career, Analiese served as a legal associate to a Division 1 Justice of the Federal Circuit and Family Court of Australia. Following this, she worked as a solicitor in a Sydney-based family law firm before relocating to Orange in May 2023. In Orange, she joined Cheney Suthers, a general practice firm, where she broadened her experience across a variety of legal issues affecting regional communities. Her move to the Central West deepened her understanding of the legal challenges faced in rural areas and the importance of accessible legal services. Analiese has served as the Social Chair of the Central West Law Society, supporting connection within the local legal profession.
