

About our Presenter

Robyn Bradey is the principal of RB Counselling & Consultancy Services.

She is a Mental Health Accredited Social worker in private practice and provides clinical supervision to mental health professionals and coaching to a variety of people in health and law. She is currently the Mental Health consultant and trainer for the Law Society of NSW, Legal Aid. The ODPP, the CDPP, a number state and Commonwealth government depts, the tribunals and Ombudsmen, RACS and some law firms.

Her brief is to assist the profession to more effectively meet the challenges of practise and to support enjoyment of a balanced professional and personal life. She provides the opportunity to explore practical solutions based on empirical data to help realise and manage change.

Robyn's professional experience over 34 years and her sensible approach, skills and insights into the issues that confront the profession combine with her knowledge of the latest developments in science and sociology to deliver this valuable seminar series.